Reflections on What I’ve Learned From Walking (or Running) a Step With Students (N = 9)
Michelle “Mikki” R. Hebl
Rice University
In this talk, I will present some very brief portions of the bios of nine of my students. Within these bios are themes of humor, sadness, joy, marathon running, and a passion for psychology and research. It is my hope that audiences will see their own students in my students, take away lessons, and affirm that they too appreciate the steps that they get to take with college students.

Motivation Science
Official Journal of the Society for the Study of Motivation
Editors: Guido Gendolla, PhD, and Rex Wright, PhD
www.apa.org/pubs/journals/mot

Meet the Editors of Motivation Science at the APS Convention!
Saturday, May 27 at 3 – 4 p.m.
Booth #314

The new editors of Motivation Science strive to grow the journal’s reputation and accelerate the editorial process, while expanding submissions and readership from diverse professional fields. They seek to establish it as a central source for researchers involved in the science of motivation and people who apply this knowledge, emphasizing the journal’s unique importance for “its undivided focus on motivation, the breadth of its intended audience, and its ambition.”
