

How to Become Great at Just About Anything

December 05, 2016

Freakonomics:

This week on Freakonomics Radio: What if the thing we call “talent” is grotesquely overrated? And what if deliberate practice is the secret to excellence? Those are the claims of the research psychologist Anders Ericsson, who has been studying the science of expertise for decades.

Listen the whole story: Freakonomics