

What Couples Who Communicate Well Do Differently

March 09, 2016

Refinery29:

Countless books and articles have been written on the importance of communicating in romantic relationships, but a recent study suggests that there's one aspect of communication that stands out above the rest: empathy. The study, published last month in Psychological Science, found that feeling empathy mattered more than simply listening to what partners had to say.

Read the whole story: Refinery29