

New Research Examines the Reluctance We Feel Before Offering Support to Someone in Need

July 20, 2022

A new study published in Psychological Science urges us not to think twice about offering support or condolences to a friend or acquaintance in need. The study suggests that we have a tendency to underestimate how positively recipients respond to our expressions of support.

...