

Pets may not contribute to better health: researcher

August 08, 2011

The Globe and Mail:

You get home after a rough day — its high point being laid off, getting dumped or finding out your mom's in the hospital — and Old Yeller charges over, panting with glee at your arrival.

Instantly, your face breaks into a smile and the day's worries subside.

This could be a PSA that suggests pets equal a longer, happier life, no?

Read more: