

Scientists say people with these facial features may get paid more

December 24, 2015

Business Insider:

When you first interview for a job or head into a salary negotiation, there's a lot that's under your control.

You can easily impress the person on the other side of the table by talking about your past achievements, ambitions for the future, and ability to lead a team to greatness.

According to new research, those whose faces convey the impression of trustworthiness and dominance may walk away with a higher salary.
