

Sweaty Babies

May 21, 2013

BBC:

A study of one year old babies has found an intriguing connection between their physiological symptoms when they are confronted with a frightening situation, and their levels of aggression two years later. Professor Stephanie Van Goozen from Cardiff University's School of Psychology in Wales conducted this new research. It was published online this week in the journal Psychological Science.

Read the whole story: BBC