

Individual Variation in Resisting Temptation: Implications for Addiction

September 09, 2014

At the 2014 APS Annual Convention, APS William James Fellow Terry Robinson discussed how cues associated with rewards, such as food or drugs, can acquire considerable control over motivated behavior, leading to excessive consumption.